

TAILGATE DINNER

FEATURING AMANI TOOMER

Amani Toomer played college football at the University of Michigan from 1992 to 1995, and graduated with a degree in Communication and Broadcasting. In 1994, he broke the school's single-season record with 1,096 receiving yards and was a finalist for the Biletnikoff Award and a first-team All-Big Ten honoree.

He was the second round draft pick by the New York Giants in 1996 and can proudly say he played for this team for the entirety of his career. Amani played from 1996 through the 2008 season and is a proud member of the 2007 Super Bowl Team. He was an integral member of the Giants for over a decade and holds Giants' record for most career receiving yards, receptions, receiving touchdowns, and most consecutive games with at least one reception (94). In 2010, Amani was induced in the initial group selected for induction into the New York Giants Ring of Honor. He is #16 on the list of Top 100 Giants players of all time. He currently works in radio for ESPN New York.
